

The books Learning at Bodhshala is written by Rajan Venkatesh, who ran the school at SIDH for four years. His experiments in education revolved around a Production-Integrated Basic Education programme inspired by Mahatma Gandhi's 'Buniyadi Shiksha.' Venkatesh sought to implement a curriculum which would re-orient the school to its community. To this end, the students set-up a seed bank, assisted in the farming and production of various spices and herbs, and learnt crafts like carpentry and tailoring.
